According to a press release put out by Bouffe Director Kim Laroche, 56 volunteers put in 119 hours of work, and came from several fire departments, the Sûreté du Quebec, media organizations, schools and other community groups.

In total, the drive brought in $10,116.65 and 406.9 kg of food, a haul that Laroche called "amazing". This total is slightly up from last year's, which brought in $8,850 and 335 kg. of food.

"These donations will allow Bouffe Pontiac to prepare approximately 160-200 Christmas baskets that will be distributed to Pontiac families in need," she wrote in the release.

Artists Association looks back on successful year

PORTAGE DU FORT Dec. 4, 2019

A group of local artists gathered at the Stone School Gallery in Portage du Fort last week, as the Pontiac Artists Association (PAA) held its annual general meeting (AGM).

ArtPontiac President Louise Guay opened the event with a word of welcome.

After a review of the minutes from last year's AGM, Guay presented the association's annual report in French and English, which she explained was a great success.

Among other things, the report highlighted the hard work the association's members had put in over the past year, their achievements and their contributions to the Pontiac's artistic identity.

Highlights included a fundraising event titled Works on Paper Exhibition and Exchange 2019, an exhibition called Reclaimed and an art presentation put on by Pontiac High School students inside the Stone School Gallery.

Guay also announced that after another successful tour last summer, the PAA has postponed next year's Pontiac Artist's Tour, after running for 30 years straight.

"It's because the participants are exhausted and there aren't any new participants or people that want to join," she said. "So, we decided that it's time to stop. It's always good to stop and rethink what you want to do."

She continued by speaking about the PAA's upcoming projects, which include an eight-artist printmaking exhibition in Shawville's streets called Interconnexion, as well as another exhibition from PHS students.

"I'm proud of the exhibit Reclaimed because there was public involvement," Guay said. "I liked working with the Pontiac High School because we like to have more younger people involved in art and, for them, it was the first time that they showed something in a gallery."

After thanking each member on the PAA's board of directors, Guay presented a special gift to two of the association's members - Treasurer Chris Seifreid and Gabrielle Dupuis - for their long tenures of taking care of the association's administrative and financial duties.

France Lamarche followed up with a report on the Pontiac School of the Arts. Valerie Bridgeman continued with an overview of the 30th annual Pontiac Artists' Studio Tour and Dale Shutt gave a summary of 2019, which marked the 12th year of exhibitions at the Stone School Gallery.

Campbell's Bay brewery celebrates first anniversary

CALEB NICKERSON CAMPBELL'S BAY Dec. 8, 2019

On Sunday afternoon, the restaurant at Brauwerk Hoffman brewery in Campbell's Bay celebrated their first anniversary. Over the past 12 months, their location just outside of town on Hwy. 148 has seen some considerable upgrades and changes.

Owner Todd Hoffman explained that customers had been asking for an area where they could sit and enjoy one of the many traditional brews on tap, along with some food. He said they began construction on the restaurant located just across the parking lot from the brewery building in April and were ready to open by October, with indoor seating for 52 and patio space for close to 200. The interior is a classic bierhalle, with long wooden benches and a plain concrete interior.

"We originally started exactly a year ago with just the brewery, but a lot of people that were coming to the brewery ... expressed interest that they wanted to have a consume on premise, that they could actually sit down and drink a pint of beer here," he said.

Hoffman added that the experimenting."

restaurant will be closed for the winter months after Dec. 21, but will be fully operational in the spring.

In celebration of the first anniversary, he had samples of his newest creation, which is a step outside his focus on German beers. The new brew is called Royal Hunting Party, a delicious, copper-hued English pale ale.

"The new beer, it's sort of a breakaway," he said. "We've always been doing Germanstyle ales and lagers, but this one we decided to do a traditional English-style pale ale. We called it Royal Hunting Party, it has some historical notions to it, about in 1872 when Prince Arthur came up, he's one of Queen Victoria's sons, and he went up the Picanoc River, he did some moose hunting up there."

"There's still lots of German style beers that we can make, but we wanted to bring a

Pontiac theme into it," he continued, adding that over the winter he will be working on a beer that pays homage to the Francophone heritage of the Pontiac region as well. "This winter when we shut first anniversary on Sunday. Dec. 7, 2019 The Pontiac Senior Comets have won their seventh straight

On Dec. 7, the Chutes de Coulonge Park in Mansfield et Pontefract was a colourful, winter wonderland, as the park kicked off its annual festival of lights. Throughout the park, Christmas lights attached to archways in the forest, making the scene even more beautiful to the eye.

J.D. POTIÉ MANSFIELD ET PONTEFRACT Dec. 7, 2019

On Saturday, hundreds gathered at the Chutes Coulonge Park in Mansfield et Pontefract, to soak in some Christmas spirit during the first part of the park's annual Festival of Lights.

According to the park's Director General Cyndy Phillips, the event, which features the park illuminated with thousands of colourful Christmas lights, is one of its proudest traditions.

She explained that the festival is an opportunity for locals to witness the park's natural beauty and experience everything it has to offer in a different kind of light.

"By allowing people to visit the site in the winter, they can see the lights all throughout the park and all the waterfalls and have a hot chocolate by the bonfire," she said.

With colourful lights illuminating the park's pathways and many structures, attendees enjoyed themselves strolling through the park, catching a few of the marvelous light displays to see the park's waterfall in its most glowing fashion, as its water emanated in a vibrant, a lot of joy to the community multi-colour scheme like a rainbow. By the bonfire, a group of attendees listened closely, as local historian Ronald Henri regaled them with stories about driving large logs down the Coulonge River.

Featuring a different theme every week, next Saturday's event will feature live music by the bonfire.

The following week, the park will host a VIP visitor from the North Pole. During its fourth and final edition of the year on Dec. 28, Brauwerk Hoffman will invite the community to try out its latest samples of craft beer and pretzels, all while enjoying the beautiful views at the Chutes. As one of the park's most popular activities of the year, especially during the winter, the festival of lights is an important fundraiser for the park, which uses the event's proceeds to pay maintenance costs, Phillips said. "It's a chance for us to welcome visitors in a season where Folks also had the chance we don't have other activities going on," she said.

For Phillips, the event brings because it gives people another reason to share the holiday cheer with their friends and family, while getting a view of a truly majestic display of Christmas decorating.

"It gives people a chance to get out during the holiday season, see some festive lights, enjoy the nature around us, see the waterfalls in a different way than they see them in the summer," she said. With favourable temperatures, a festive atmosphere and lots of families enjoying themselves at the park, Phillips was quite happy with the community's response to the festival so far.

"We've had a really great turnout," she said. "We've lucked out with the weather. We even got a little bit of snow on the ground but not too much to hamper our entire operations. It's great and we're hoping that the whole month is a beautiful month for us.

Incinerator questions

Dear Editor,

I'm glad that a dialogue has begun on this issue. It's all too common, that such discussions are left to the last minute, just as some big project is already planned, initialized and down payments have been made. Then the governing bodies hold public consultations to present foregone conclusions.

I can see potential benefits from incinerating residual waste rather than trucking it to a landfill site. But I also see potential problems and those were not addressed by Warden Toller's letter.

1. How would the garbage be brought up to demolition temperatures? You've heard the term 'dumpster fire'? Garbage burning at low temperatures creates terrible pollution. Apparently, Covanta's operation employs high temperatures but how is that achieved? Now, I'm not plotting to start up my own waste-management plant, so I'm not trying to steal secret technologies but in order to endorse this plan, I have to know that there is a way to achieve the hyper-hot temperatures required to make incineration safe. There simply has to be an investment of energy and not just a little bit.

2. What will such a plant require in terms of steadily delivered quantities of appropriate waste material? Previous plans for incineration fell flat in part, by the inability to deliver the feedstock at just the right time. Stockpiling garbage is not good but some such incinerators require a certain amount and Pontiac may not produce the right balance at the right time. So, other jurisdictions will be sending their garbage here - do we have room for that? Do we want a garbage highway leading to Pontiac?

3. How will the excess energy be utilized? There was mention of steam heating for so many homes. Steam is not easily transportable, so where in Pontiac will you find enough houses close enough to the plant to utilize the heat?

4. Generating electricity with the excess heat is a great idea — but is Hydro Québec down with that idea? In the past, HQ has been intractable in its opposition to alternative electrical sources and Ontario is de-funding renewable electrical projects already in place and producing, daydreaming instead of small nuclear plants. As if we need more nuclear waste.

5. How many jobs? If there are any long term, decent paying jobs for people who actually live in the Valley, that's a good thing But please please do not promise jobs that do not and will not exist. We're still smarting from the LiveWell scam with its 500, no make that 300, no, make that 20, no make that 0 jobs. If good answers to these questions are found, I would be in favour of, and will support the project with whatever persuasive leverage I have. The present system of trucking and dumping cannot stand for long and incineration could be far less-worse. Finally, no system of waste management will work properly, if people just toss trash instead of sending it through proper channels. I still find cups, cans, plastic trash and bags of dog poop along the streets and the PPJ trail. That's just poor citizenship, people.

Editorial Off the mark

In the first throne speech following the federal election, the government laid out their plans for the upcoming parliamentary session, putting a focus on the environment, tax cuts for parents and disappointingly, a ban on "military-style" firearms.

The call for a ban, delivered Thursday by Governor General Julie Payette, came the day before the 30th anniversary of the École Polytechnique massacre, a vicious shooting spree that claimed the lives of 14 young women. The victims and their family members have been some of the most vocal advocates for stricter gun laws in Canada, and have called on the current government to crack down on the vague collection of firearms they call "assault weapons."

While it's laudable to try and create positive change in the wake of such a horrific tragedy, the measures that the current government is proposing are an inefficient use of resources and will do very little to curb gun violence. Public Safety Minister Bill Blair is in the process of creating a list of models that will become prohibited, and during the election campaign, he estimated that there are 250,000 such firearms in the country with an average value of around $1,500. The government buyback program to reimburse current owners of these weapons is estimated to cost between $400-600 million.

This poorly thought out policy is akin to banning "sports cars" to try and cut down on motor vehicle accidents. It's a proposal that will appear effective to people unfamiliar with firearms, while doing little to address gun violence or its root causes.

Canada is not like the United States. This country isn't awash with mass shootings brought about by decades of militant arms industry lobbying and an idiotic interpretation of the constitution. Owning a firearm in Canada isn't a right; it's a privilege that comes with many restrictions.

Semi-automatic rifle magazines in Canada are already capped at five rounds (with some exceptions), and semi-automatic shotguns have similar limitations. Classifying guns based on their looks rather than their capabilities is a ridiculous strategy that won't bring about any significant change.

Many of these so-called "military-style" rifles that are set to be banned are already classified as restricted weapons, meaning that their owners have to jump through many more hoops and face more scrutiny than the owners of hunting rifles. They are essentially status symbols for collectors and gun nuts, as they can only be used legally on a target range. They aren't an existential threat to our society in the same way that gear heads with fast cars aren't an existential threat to our highways.

The van attack in Toronto proves that deranged, murderous individuals don't need military-grade weapons or training to kill large amounts of people. Our public safety dollars would be better spent cracking down on firearms illegally imported from the US and increasing funding for robust, proactive social and mental health care services. As the saying goes, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Making time for Saving money at Christmas

There's nothing better to break your budget than Christmas. The parties, events, presents and on and on, the list never ends. There are some great tips I've found online and through talking to others that are designed to help us handle the holidays on a budget - that doesn't get stretched.

1. Handmade gifts — These are the best. Pinterest or Google handmade gift ideas for grandparents, teachers, neighbours and siblings. Things homemade come straight from the heart and are often so much more valuable and cherished than something you pick up in a store. Often the materials you need are simple arts and crafts materials you might already have. There are so many ideas out there for all levels of artistry. Just take a look I'm sure you can find something.

You can also make homemade wrapping paper to save money plus it can be really cute. Some ways to be creative with this task is to re-use newspaper or brown paper that you can stamp and decorate before using it to wrap presents.

2. Make any kind of meals you host a potluck. Most people are happy to contribute when they're invited to a meal, so when they ask what they can bring sign them up with something you actually need. This not only helps cut down on expenses but also helps reduce the work load, win-win.

3. Stock up on supplies when they're on sale. This goes for food, baking ingredients (which can get very pricey), wrapping supplies, presents, chocolate and all the rest. Check the flyers, watch for last minute sales and buy when it's on sale.

4. Check yard sale sites and used websites for gifts that you need. There's no law or rule that says there needs to be a tag on something to call it a present. Try to find your child's big gift second hand to save.

5. Participate in gift exchanges instead of buying for everybody, instead of multiple gifts you could only have to buy one. For those that you feel sad about not gifting something to, make them a card or baked goods.

6. Gifts of service - I love this idea so much. You can create a coupon type booklet with all the services you will provide them with over the year. The possibilities are endless. Here are some ideas: free delivered meals, baked goods, shoveling yards, house cleaning, lawn raking or grass cutting, babysitting services etc. The sky is the limit and one of the best parts is that you don't have to fork out any cash up front for these gifts, yet the person still knows you are thinking of them.

In a farm situation, everyone who works on the farm, sells feed, seed, fertilizer, animals, equipment, buys what the farm produces and everyone else you meet will have to be greeted and dealt with in a manner that makes them want to meet or deal with you again. You will quickly learn that life will be a lot more fun if you deal with the neighbours, your partners, your family and especially, your spouse in a very amicable way.

Chistmas is coming

It's that time of year. I can tell. Something is changing ... yes the weather, but that's not what I mean. Strangers start to talk to you in the shops. It happened this past week. A woman, whom I had never met before, smiled at me and said, "Christmas is expensive." I smiled back. She's right. But I wasn't thinking about the presents we look for in the store. Rather my mind went back to the manger in Bethlehem when God broke into history some 2,000 years ago.

Jesus chose to leave His glory behind. He took on humanity, and as a baby was placed in a humble manger. He grew, lived about 33 years among us, then after going about healing and forgiving, He gave His life to redeem us. It was expensive alright. It cost Him everything.

I don't know how to turn all the busyness around that we experience at this time of year, but somehow, when all is still, when our head hits the pillow, letting the reason for the season change our perspective can bring real peace and joy to our world.

Local student takes home youth ambassador prize

J.D. POTIÉ OTTAWA Nov. 24, 2019

A couple of weeks ago, a Pontiac High School (PHS) student was recognized for her efforts in the school's outdoor education program during the final event of the Ottawa Adventure Film Festival at the Mayfair Theatre in Ottawa.

After submitting an essay about her experiences in outdoor education, Grade 11 student Joelene Cormier-Laxdal won the Youth Ambassador Award, presented by paddling gear company Level 6.

Earlier this year Cormier-Laxdal learned from her English and outdoor education teacher Jordan Kent, about an opportunity to write an essay describing what being in the outdoors meant to her.

The content of her essay revolved around her experiences in the outdoors and why being outdoors is important to her, namely how it helps her escape from the world and clear her mind.

"It helps me restore my energy that I've lost throughout the day or throughout the week," she said.

To her own surprise, while she was sitting in class one day, she received an e-mail informing her that she was invited to the Ottawa Adventure Film Festival after winning the Youth Community Ambassador Award.

"I wrote that, among a bunch of other students and youth around Ottawa and I was chosen," she said.

According to Kent, Cormier-Laxdal has been an instrumental leader in PHS' outdoor educa tion program and other extracurricular clubs ever since arriving at the school five years ago.

"She's just a good role model for the other students," he said. "She takes the time to teach others around her. She shares her passion for the outdoors. She gets other people to come out and to try it and that sort of passion and enthusiasm is contagious.'

For Kent, seeing Cormier-Laxdal win the scholarship.

award," he said. During the festival's award show, Level 6 owner Stig Larsson presented her with a triangular wooden trophy made of recycled skateboards, an ambassador account with the company as well as a "I can get a lot of their clothes and stuff," she

While she wasn't too familiar with the company before – having only seen some of their stuff here and there - Cormier-Laxdal looks forward to taking advantage of great deals on high-quality canoeing gear going forward.

"Now that I have that, I can get gear and do more canoeing and feel like I have the proper equipment for it." she said.

For Cormier-Laxdal, winning the award proved to her that being passionate about the outdoors can have a positive impact on other people whether its inspiring them to do the same as her or by taking on different kinds of activities

"Just by being a person that loves the outdoors, you can help other youth realize that they can start doing more things and that they can be recognized for doing outdoor activities as well," she said.

Coming from a small town, the 17-year-old admitted that winning the award, among a lot of candidates from all over the national capital region, felt extra special.

"It really meant a lot because I never thought I'd win an award like that," she said. "For the outdoors, in front of like a whole Ottawa Adventure Film Festival's community ... for me to win an award by them was really amazing."

Cormier-Laxdal said she has been an avid enthusiast of the outdoors ever since being introduced to PHS' canoe club program, back in grade seven.

"Ever since then, I've been doing more outdoor stuff," she said.

She explained that PHS' outdoor education program has been very beneficial for her, as it provides her with all sorts of opportunities to experience the outdoors while fostering connections with great people.

"I was able to learn how to canoe," she said. "That was definitely something that was most enjoyable. But it's also the atmosphere of people that are with you. When you're all together doing stuff, like canoeing or going hiking, you kind of have a community of people that you all respect."

While she plans on studying mechanics once finished high school, Cormier-Laxdal hopes to continue experiencing the outdoors for years to come.

"I do wish to keep the outdoors a huge part of my life, in the future," she said.

7. This may sound simple but, make a list when you're going shopping. So often we get into the stores at Christmas time and see all kinds of nice, pretty things that we don't actually need. Make a list and stick to it.

8. Focus on the celebration instead of the gifts. Have the conversation with people around you that this year, instead of gifts, you'd like to just spend time together. Plan a date to go sliding, have a meal, watch a movie or just be together without swapping gifts.

9. Take advantage of early sales throughout the year but stay organized. Don't lose those early purchased presents and have to rebuy them. If you're organized it can save money not having to buy everything at the same time.

10. The four present rule can help you keep the number of presents you buy at bay. This rule includes: something you wear. something you need, something you want and something to read.

11. This Christmas try making memories instead of buying presents. There are tons of free or really inexpensive things you can do during and leading up to the holidays to create new memories or traditions.

Here are a few ideas: driving around to look at all the Christmas lights in town (you can print off scavenger hunts), singing Christmas carols, making crafts to decorate the house with, baking, having hot chocolate and watching a great Christmas movie, participating in the free or inexpensive activities organized in your town.

Next week, I will write about my favourite Christmas activity -Christmas baking with the kiddos. Hope these tips help take some pressure off the budget for this Christmas season.

Fort Coulonge On Saturday evening, hundreds of Pontiac residents set to the streets of Mansfield et Pontefract and Fort Coulonge to celebrate the holiday cheer during the annual Santa Claus Parade. According to one of the event's organizers Patrick Bertrand, the event is a collaboration by the volunteer firefighters of both villages' departments and an annual tradition that dates back to as early as the late 1980s.

He explained that the event used to take place during the day-time, before organizers slotted it to the evening, 15 years

Scheduled for 5 p.m., participants gathered at the Mansfield et Pontefract town hall parking lot to prepare for the event. Once everyone was registered and ready to go, a large fire truck led the participants down rue Dagenais, in front of Parc Amyotte.

The participants, included around a half-dozen excessively decorated semi-trucks, a number of flashy pickup trucks pulling trailers with people in them and even a lineup of equestrians trotting the streets on horses from RS Ranch. To cap it all off, Santa Claus rolled into town on his red sleigh

The parade kept rolling from the Amyotte project, down rue Lorrain before going onto Hwy. 148 where hundreds of spectators anxiously awaited their arrival.

As the float made its way onto the White Bridge, attendees cheered in excitement, as the float's participants proudly waved at the crowds while honking their horns and flashing their lights.

During the parade, a number of good Samaritans, including Mayor Gilles Dionne, handed out candy to children in attendance.

The float continued towards the Metro, before heading to rue Principale, then on rue Baume en route for the Centre de loisirs des Draveurs

"In the first few years, the circuit changed a number of times," he said. "We kept what was the safest for the people and we wanted to reach as many people as possible because a long file of over 20 different they're all spread out onto the floats, from festive firetrucks, streets.'

To finish off the evening in style, those who participated in the parade were invited to the Mansfield et Pontefract fire department to listen to Christmas jingles, socialize with friends and snack on some cheesy pizza.

As one of the most well-participated events' in recent memory, Bertrand noted that this year's parade included over 100 participants in around 30 different floats.

While the event is always quite popular, Bertrand said he noticed that local residents were even more appreciative for this year's event.

After record breaking floods hit the region, last spring, Bertrand believes that the high level of enthusiasm from locals came as a sense of gratitude for what the town still has to offer, just months after going through a rough period.

"A smile is worth a thousand words," he said. "We saw people raise lanterns when we passed side of the road, it brought out families from their homes to get fresh air outside. Everyone was were dancing."

Seeing hundreds of people watching on both sides of the streets and hundreds more participating in the floats themselves, Bertrand said he was thrilled with the community's event from one year to the next.

"It was cold and people were still outside," he said. "It really surprised me. I feel like the community appreciates it. If we didn't do it, I don't think we'd be criticized. But it's something that's important for the community when it comes to turning the page on another year in the books.

Campbell's Bay

Front Street in Campbell's Bay on Saturday afternoon, hundreds of local residents crowded almost every inch of sidewalk as the annual Christmas parade

Ferrigan explained that, by being one of the few daytime parades in the Pontiac, the event brings out people from all over region from one year to the next.

"It seems to bring people from all their local towns because they get an opportunity to see Santa in the afternoon," he said. Judging by the high turnout of spectators and the large number of floats at this year's event, Ferrigan estimated that it was likely the town's most popular parade in recent memory.

"To me, it's the biggest turnout in a long time," he said. "This is personally one of the biggest ones for sure."

As a Campbell's Bay-native and now a member of municipal council, Ferrigan said he takes a lot of pride in putting on event's by them ... some did fires on the like the parade for his fellow residents.

He believes that getting everyone together to celebrate happy. There was music, people an occasion as a community, whether it's the holidays or a summer event, is the best way of keeping a small town going

Turkey dinner for seniors in Waltham

J.D. Potié, THE EQUITY On Dec. 7, the Waltham RA, hosted its annual Golden Age Christmas dinner at the town hall, drawing around 100 people to attend. Pictured, a group of volunteers form an assembly line inside the kitchen.

J.D. POTIÉ WALTHAM Dec. 7, 2019

Around 100 seniors gathered at the town hall in Waltham for a delicious turkey feast at the local RA's annual Golden Age Christmas Dinner.

According to one of the event's organizers, Megan Kelly, the event has been taking place in the town every year since being first started in the 1970s.

The event was open to all residents and business owners over the age of 50 and served as an opportunity to bring local seniors together to celebrate Christmas as a community, Kelly said.

For the delicious turkey feast, a group of volunteers formed an assembly line in the kitchen, where they prepared tons of tasty-looking plates topped with all sorts of goodies including cooked veggies, mashed potatoes and gravy.

Four additional volunteers roamed the hall serving the attendees their food.

J.D. POTIÉ FORT COULONGE Dec. 6, 2019

On Friday evening, hundreds of local parents and their children packed the Knights of Columbus Hall in Fort Coulonge for the town's annual spaghetti supper with Santa Claus.

According to one of the event's organizers, Suzanne Dazé, the event was a collaboration of the Knights of Columbus, Le Patro and the Maison de la Famille du Pontiac. She said that the event has been a tradition in the village for nearly 30 years.

With the holidays around the corner, the event was an opportunity for parents to get together and socialize and for kids to meet Santa Claus, while enjoying a delicious meal at an affordable price.

The event kicked off at support. With a large pile of gifts underneath a Christmas tree at the back of the hall, each of the attendees earned door prizes as well.

For Kelly, the event is very positive for local seniors because it's another opportunity for them to socialize and has become an event that many look forward to every year.

"It gets them out and it gives us a chance to give back," she said. With the hall nearly packed

At around 5:30 p.m., Santa Claus rolled in for an appearance, to the delight of the many kids in the building. Kids had the chance to meet the man in person, pose for pictures and let him know what they wanted under the tree this year. A short while later, a group of local dancers, disguised as gypsy witches, called the Moon Broomers, entertained a large crowd of attendees with a set of choreographed dance routines.

Thanks to the local Daughters of Isabella and the Knights of Columbus, every child under the age of 12 who attended was able to go home with a toy as a Christmas present, Dazé said.

Plus, parents who were interested were graced with a special workshop on winter car safety, which included tips and tricks on how to properly install child car seats.

For Dazé, the event is very positive for residents because it gives them a chance to enjoy a delicious, holiday meal while not having to break the bank for a night out with their family.

"It's a great get-together," she said. "It gives a chance to families who don't have the means of going out ... certainly, we're doing this, all for the children.'

At just $6 per ticket, for people 12 years and up, attendees got to indulge in spaghetti, topped with delicious tomato sauce, along with a wide array of home-made pastries and sweets for dessert.

While the event usually doesn't raise a fortune, Daze said that the most important part about putting it on is to give back to the people who support them.

"It's all for the community,"

Best wishes are also going out to Brittany McKenny and Kris Belsher on the safe arrival of their baby girl Hannah on Dec. 9. She is a little sister for Emeric, and a grandchild for Janet and Leo McKenny and Joan and Robert Belsher. Congratulations to the whole family.

Mountainview Turf celebrated another great season at their annual Christmas Party on Nov. 29 with a luncheon in the shop. Billy T catered a delicious turkey dinner and there was plenty of fun throughout the day. This year, plaques were presented to Roger Trudeau for 20 years of service, to Terry Provost for 30 years of service and to Ray Johnston for 40 years of service. It was a wonderful festive celebration.

It was a beautiful crisp evening to be out to tour the amazing décor at the homes of Anik and Stephane Monast, Laura and Rob Hobbs, Isabel and Doug Schwartz and Heather and Adam Sally. Each home was so unique and well done. Door prizes were won by Myrna Palmer, Marilyn Desabrais, Marise Gauthier and

Susan McCleary. A light snack was served in the Ouyon United Church basement throughout the evening. The support for this fundraiser is greatly appreciated. Santa Claus was in town on Saturday and it was a gorgeous afternoon for the annual parade hosted by the Quyon Lions Club. Kudos to all of the local businesses, organizations and individuals who participated by entering floats in the parade. They all looked fantastic. I was fortunate to have many excited little ones in my front yard who were thrilled to see Santa go by. They also got to meet him at the new community centre where Birthday wishes are going out to Amelia Dowe, turning two on Dec. 14. I'd like to wish my niece Danica Provost a happy birthday, as she turns 11 on Dec. 15. Happy birthday to Jenna Laframboise, also on Dec. 15 and to Quin Young and Brett Stanley on Dec. 17. Best wishes to everyone celebrating this week.

There is more festive fun coming in the days leading up to Christmas. This Friday evening, a community caroling event is being organized by Mitchel Trudeau starting at 6 p.m. I am so looking forward to it.

On Dec. 15, the Quyon Legion will be hosting their annual Christmas Bingo.

Folks should also mark their calendars for Dec. 20, as the Pontiac Community Players are bringing their Little Women Radio Play to Quyon United Church that evening. It really is the most wonderful time of they got to sit on his lap and put the vear!

THANKS

Dear Heart of Jesus in the past I have asked for many favours. This time I ask for this favour, special one "name the favour." Take it, dear Jesus and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then in Your merciful eyes it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say this prayer for 3 days and promise publication and your favour will be granted. Never known to fail. D.L.

Quyon homeowners show decorations

On Dec. 2, the Quyon Pastoral Charge celebrated the holidays by inviting the community to check out some of the most well-decorated homes in the area, during the annual Quyon Home Tour. According to one of the event's organizers, Jillian Young, the event is a fundraiser for the local churches where local residents volunteer to decorate their homes and open their doors for the community to take a peek at them.

"We always ask them to decorate as they normally would," she said. "Sometimes people go a bit beyond that, decorating every room in the house ... we had one house this year that did just the main floor."

Ever since being founded in 2004, the event has become quite popular in the town, said Young who noted that the church sold close to 150 tickets this year.

"That's a very successful year for us," she said.

At $10 per person, tickets gave access to all four homes on the tour, which included three stops in Quyon and
