CAMPBELL'S BAY Dec. 11, 2019

Early Wednesday morning, a fire tore through a triplex in Campbell's Bay, leaving a family and two other tenants homeless.

Fire crews were called to a structural fire, located at 5 rue Patterson at 12:28 a.m. Dec. 11. Five trucks and 17 firefighters responded from the Campbell's Bay-Litchfield Department, with an additional truck and six firefighters dispatched from the Shawville-Clarendon Department.

CB-LFD Fire Chief Kevin Kluke said that the building was fully involved by the time they arrived, and residents had already evacuated the premises. Crews worked quickly to prevent the fire from doing damage to a neighbouring house, which was located just six feet from the burning building. Kluke said that they defended the home with ample amounts of water.

"We fought it quite aggressively to keep it at bay," he said, adding that the cause of the blaze was deemed

The crew from Shawville left around four in the morning, Kluke said, and the Campbell's Bay-Litchfield personnel were on scene until about 10:30 a.m., extinguishing hot spots.

Sorting Centre announces layoffs

CALEB NICKERSON

LITCHFIELD Dec. 13, 2019

On Friday morning, a press conference was called at the offices of the Pontiac Sorting Centre to announce that they would be laying off 32 workers and closing their facility to the public. The conference was attended by Mayors John Armstrong (Clarendon), Lynne Cameron (Portage du Fort) and Colleen Larivière (Litchfield) as well as Warden Jane Toller.

The site's director of operations Gerry Philippe explained that the layoffs were due to the company's difficulties in dealing with the provincial Ministry of Environment.

In February of this year, the Sorting Centre, located on a portion of the Litchfield Industrial Park property, was slapped with more than $40,000 in fines from the Ministry for several infractions, including the improper storage of waste, dating back several years.

Philippe explained that they had been trying to get approval for a technical landfill on a separate section of the property, which already houses a former dump site that was used during the decommissioning of the former paper mill, which would allow them to dispose of residual materials like asbestos. He had received a verbal assurance from an official at the ministry when the site was purchased that the authorization would only take a few months, but those months stretched into several years.

"Our reality is such that until a time where we can get the certificate of authorization for the landfill ... then it's very difficult for us to do something, because all the debris that we have, all incoming matter, have to be shipped to Lachute," he said. "Now we all know that going to Lachute and back is about a five hour trip all together. So you make two trips a day, it can add up to be very, very costly.'

"We've undergone an ordinance from the Ministry of Environment, which has been very costly, which has drawn the majority of our funds actually," he continued. "So we've come to a point where our sister company [Amor Construction] will be taking over the cleaning operations for the rest of the ordinance regulations or requests and then. They will decide what happens afterwards.

Amor Construction will now use the site as a private sorting centre for their waste, meaning that demolition debris that they had been accepting from areas affected by the spring flooding would also have to be shipped to Lachute, at great cost.

"We're trying to supply a service, not only to the municipalities and the MRC, but to all those companies that come here, we've got probably about 150 companies that come here with asphalt shingles for example, or construction debris, or things like this," he said.

Gerry Philippe, the director of operations at the Pontiac Sorting Centre, announced on Friday that the company would be laying off 32 employees, due to difficulties they've had dealing with the Ministry of Environment. The company was fined more than $40,000 earlier this year for a slew of non-compliance issues dating back several years.

He said that two local companies had purchased equipment to haul demolition waste from the floods to the site, and would now have to reassess their business models.

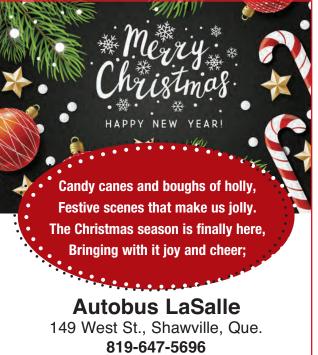

Philippe also thanked the local officials for their motions in support of the facility at MRC and municipal councils. He added that he hoped the measures were only temporary.

Warden Toller reiterated her support for the site and said she would bring the subject up in her meetings with both the Ministry of Environment and Minister Responsible for the Outaouais, Mathieu Lacombe.

J.D. POTIÉ CAMPBELL'S BAY

Heritage College's Pontiac Campus in Campbell's Bay was packed on Friday, as around 30 local residents gathered for a holiday luncheon and to recognize two students for their outstanding commitment and perseverance in the school's agriculture education programs.

Presented by the campus' manager Greg Graham and its Director General Gordon McIvor, the event celebrated the achievements of Shawvillenative Jennifer McCagg and Ellen Rice-Hogan from Venosta. who have both completed two out of three attestations from the campus' agriculture studies program and are in the midst of completing the third and final one.

After a brief period of socializing, McIvor opened the event with a word of welcome where he thanked everyone for attending the ceremony.

He spoke about his origin in the field of education and brought up the significance of the countless sacrifices that students make to be able to attend college, before wishing everyone a happy new year.

Graham followed up with a speech of his own where he read brief stories about each of the laureates before announcing their names and presenting them with certificates.

New DG at Le Patro

On Dec. 11, Le Patro in Mansfield et Pontefract announced the nomination of Suzanne Dazé as its newest Director General. With 15 years of experience with the organization, Dazé's job will focus on ensuring the quality coordination of employees, submitting grant applications and raising funds for the organization.

J.D. POTIÉ MANSFIELD ET PONTEFRACT Dec 18 2019

Last week, Le Patro in Mansfield et Pontefract announced, via its Facebook page, the nomination of its newest Director General, Suzanne Dazé,

According to the press release, Dazé boasts 15 years of experience with the organization and her knowledge of the area along with her numerous accomplishments over her tenure made her the best candidate for the position.

Dazé will be replacing Father Marc Frappier who had served with Le Patro for over three decades and the organization wishes him all the best.

Dazé said she applied for the job earlier this fall, when Le Patro announced that the position was going to be open.

"They did interviews," she said. "They had a number of candidates and I think I was chosen, largely based on the experience I had accumulated over the course of the last 15

Knowing it was a big task to handle, Dazé said she pondered her options for as long as she could, making sure she considered every consequence, before making her decision.

"I applied on the last day before the deadline," she said. It was a delicate decision to make when you have a family, a spouse and an organization that demands a lot of your time, you have to commit yourself to staying involved and working while not damaging your family life at the same time."

Previously, Dazé had worked with Le Patro as an administrative secretary, specializing in all sorts of paperwork-related duties, including accounting. After a few years, she got involved in event coordinating where she ran community activities, submitted grant applications and made a lot of relationships with local residents, organizations and educational

"Schools knew me because I regularly went to schools in Fort Coulonge," she said. "Le Patro was offering activities, so I went to do them."

"I did grant applications and batical, Dazé noted that she also participated in all of the municipality's programs," she added. "I also involved myself with partners, meetings and all that. So, I kind of got used to everything that happened and that's how I got the experience to be able to apply for the job."

Along with the overall functioning of the organization, tives and events.

Having been chosen by members of the organization's administrative council, Dazé said she felt very touched because it proves that her relentless dedication and countless efforts haven't gone unnoticed.

"It shows that the people with the organization know what I have to offer," she said. "For the community, it's touching to see them tell me 'Suzanne, you're going to do a great job."

While the opportunity does provide a sense of uneasiness and unpredictability, Dazé said she feels comforted knowing that she has a great supporting cast of family, friends and co-workers to help her out when she needs it.

"It's a little bit scary and very demanding," she said. "But I have a lot of help around me."

Along with plenty of experience in the field like in the office, Dazé said her likeable personality, open-mindedness and willingness to seek out assistance in times of need will greatly benefit her en route to plenty of success in her new

"I'm very sociable and people aren't afraid to approach me and discuss things," she said. "I'm very open to discussions about new projects and things like that and I'm very fast when it comes to answering e-mails, submitting grant applications."

Searching for silver linings

Why does it always seem like the bad news hits all

With staff shortages at the local hospital putting lives in jeopardy, to layoffs at local businesses threat-ening family's livelihoods with less than a week to go before the holidays, there was no shortage of awful things to report on these past few days. Add to that the first real storm this winter has bestowed upon us, with the resulting power outages and accidents that go along with it, and it would seem that a black cloud is hanging over the region.

Like the adage says, it is always darkest before the dawn, meaning in our case that the situation is likely to get a whole lot more bleak before it improves in any noticeable way. There are too many factors at play in the myriad of problems that assail our county, too many institutions and power-brokers for a population of less than 15,000 people to ever hope to

Health care is an issue, not only across Quebec, but the nation as well. Federal health transfers have stagnated in the past decade, and penny-pinching provincial schemes have left patients and staff feeling the burn. Add to that the squeeze being put on other aspects of rural living, and you have an idea of why our population is declining steadily. Replacing the guy at the top of the local health authority may have felt cathartic to some, but the real issue is a lot larger than a single bureaucrat.

The decline in rural services corresponds directly with the decline in rural employment. Where there were dozens of firms offering competitive salaries, now there are only a handful of businesses scraping by. Those few left over are hamstrung by ever increasing regulation and competition from bigger players in the province and across the globe.

This world has no place for the little guy, the traditional lifestyle or values that were once held sacrosanct. In fact, it appears pretty cold and unforgiving most of the time. If there was ever a time to search for silver linings, it's now.

While it's true that health care services are stretched to the limit, it should be astonishing that we've had such top notch service for so long. The staff, volunteers and donors to this Community Hospital are what have kept it operational, in spite of the changes brought about by the province. The response from local citizens to the decrees from Gatineau has been fierce and commendable, and needs to be sustained until we get real results.

It's a struggle to live in an economically depressed area, especially one that's been hit with both natural disasters like the spring floods and man-made disasters like the decline of local industry. This Christmas should be a reminder to think of the reasons why residents are so adamant about staying in Pontiac County. What makes this place so great? It sure as hell isn't the internet or cell service.

Broadly speaking, it's the people. The fact that people can leave their doors unlocked at night or their cars running and unattended when they visit the depanneur.

Community like this doesn't come about in a vacuum, it's something that's worked at, day in and day out. While it may be easy to focus on the negatives, having gratitude for what this region has to offer is something far more in line with the spirit of the sea-

Christmas baking

I love that we have a whole weekend to spend prepping for Christmas before the big day, which is just one week away. I know there are so many last minute details to take care of that have just sort of snuck up on us. I myself thought I was ahead of the game back in November, but am now feeling the pinch of just a few days left to get things done. Throughout the stress, crossing off lists and rushing, I am trying really hard to stop and create wonderful memories with the kiddos.

One thing we do yearly is bake goodies for our friends and neighbours. It's actually one of my most favourite, festive activities. Try and carve out an afternoon or evening as a family to prepare some yummy treats to share at Christmas.

You absolutely do not have to be an all time great baker to accomplish this. I promise you, I am the most impatient baker ever, so my goodies are never perfect, yet we generally don't receive any complaints either. I think the key is all in the recipe.

Tips for baking with little helpers:

1. Choose a forgiving recipe, a recipe that isn't too precise. One easy Christmas idea would be bark (there are a million kinds to choose from). These recipes allow for freedom with ingredients. Children can sprinkle pretzels on the bottom, help melt the chocolate for the top and generously apply M&M's as decorations over the chocolate. There is no wrong way and however it ends up it is

2. If possible, let your child have a say in what recipe they make. Give them a few choices of possibilities and then let them choose. Depending on your child's age have them help you read through each step. Online recipes with pictures are great for this.

behind the horses. The town did have a big heavy roller to roll the streets flat when they got too rough.

In the spring when the snow started to melt and the winter roads started to break up some drivers only came out on a very cold day when the horses wouldn't break through the two or three feet of packed snow on the streets. Did you ever wonder why the entrance to older stores is three or four steps up from the street? That was so when the snow melted in town the water wouldn't run into the store.

In the valley snow is something to play in and we know how to move it around. Farmers like enough snow to blow around the buildings and bank up the buildings that animals are wintered in.

We hope for and expect a White Christmas and it looks like we'll get our wish. Let's also hope that our thousands of snow fighters will get Christmas off to enjoy it with their families.

For last minute Christmas shoppers, remember that gifts that don't need batteries run forever. Let's enjoy old friends this holiday season and make a few new ones too.

Don't forget the cold milk and homemade cookies for Santa and a flake of green second cut for the reindeer.

Response to five questions posed by Robert Wills

Dear Editor,

Response to the five questions posed by Robert Wills.

I have appreciated Robert Wills thoughts and questions about our MRC Pontiac Project for a waste-to-energy facility. I look forward to visiting different parts of the Pontiac in the new year to meet with residents to further explain how this works and the benefits to the

Here are the responses to his questions from the Dec. 10 issue of THE EQUITY.

1. How would the garbage be brought up to demolition temperatures?

Covanta, the company that built and operates the Durham/York waste-toenergy facility pre-heats the combustion chamber with auxiliary burners which can be fueled by natural gas, propane or oil, (depending on the facility). Once the boilers are at their operating temperature, municipal solid waste is introduced into the furnace. Once the start-up process is complete, the combustion process is completely self-sustaining. No additional auxiliary fuel is required aside from the waste itself. The heat content or higher heating value of the waste when managed in a carefully controlled combustion process, reaches temperatures in excess of 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

2. What will such a plant require in terms of steady delivered quantities of waste material? Will there be stock piling and where will that take place? A modern waste-to-energy facility operates 24 hours a day/seven days a week, 365 days a year. These facilities are built to run all year long with scheduled down time for routine maintenance. There is no storage outside the facility. There is no debris or odour. Typical waste facilities design waste bunkers to store and inventory approximately seven days of the daily processing throughout (ie. facility that processes 1,000 tonnes per day has a waste bunker that can hold 7,000 tonnes of municipal solid waste.) The waste bunker is a very effective tool for fuel management and fuel mixing. Most facilities have limited deliveries on Saturday and no deliveries Sunday. With holidays and weather delays, fuel storage is important to maintain efficient and safe operations. Remember a welldesigned waste-to-energy facility operates under negative pressure which means air is drawn in from the bunker area into the combustion chambers and thus any odour from the MSW does not leave the building.

3. How will the excess energy be utilized? How will the steam be used and transported?

A typical waste-to-energy facility will utilize approximately 10 per cent of the energy it produces to run the plant. The remaining 90 per cent can be processed through a steam turbine and sold to the hydrogrid. One could also design the Turbine Generator with a steam extraction port or bypass with the idea that steam could be sold/utilized by an industrial customer combined heat and power/district heat and power/district energy is a very efficient and sustainable design system. In fact, in Durham the Covanta facility provides heat and light to its tenant OPG, as well there will now be 2,000 new employees who are locating to new businesses across the street. They were attracted to this location because of the energy provided by the waste-toenergy facility. Even with power outages they can continue to operate. A state-of the art facility as we plan to have could become the anchor tenant for an Eco-Energy Park which includes anaerobic digestion (AD), mixed recyclable processing facility (MRF) and other sustainable businesses. 4. Is Hydro Quebec in agreement yet?

We are currently investigating this and it is our hope that the province and Hydro Quebec will support this initiative. Premier Legault stated on May 26 that one of his major priorities was producing electricity. There is already a small wasteto-energy facility for commercial waste in Quebec. Our project could be the first household waste and could also be helpful with contaminated recyclables, excess plastic, tires, institutional waste and industrial. 5. How many jobs?

We estimate approximately 50 jobs.

Most of these will be available for people in the Pontiac to apply for. There is specific training that is required. Some of the jobs include: Two technicians, a project engineer, an audit technician, 24 operators, and staff to run, six maintenance workers and nine people in the office. There are also drivers of the 53-foot trucks which bring waste from the various transfer stations. We also hope to have another transformation which takes the left-over fly-ash and instead of landfilling it different streams are pulled out which can be re-used. These include sand, the ingredients to make cement. This would create additional jobs.

Belley is thrilled to have seen the team catch fire like it has. With a lot of hockey still left to played, however, he's hopeful that the group can remain cohesive and play to the best of its abilities for the remainder of the season.

"It's always great to win," he said. "The atmosphere is great with the guys in the dressing room. We're having fun. For sure, the start of the season was difficult. But we felt like we never gave up and that we have a lot of character on this team. I hope it continues like this.'

He attended l'École Secondaire Nicolas Gatineau where he developed in their Sport Études hockey program. Playing on a regular basis alongside other people who were equally passionate about the game, he believes his time at the school played a significant role in his development as a player and as a person.

"We practiced almost every day," he said. "So, for sure you improve and I think it's a great school of life. The coaches know what to do to make us players and people as well. As an individual, you develop a lot more than in regular school." Always striving to reach his highest potential, Belley remembers spending a large portion of his childhood attached to the game he loved.

"When I was a baby, I would wander around carrying a mini-stick and played everywhere in the house," he said. "My dad made me skate when I was three years-old. I was always playing hockey or watching hockey and could never get enough of it."

Growing up with two older siblings 10 and 14 years older than he was Belley believes his daily surroundings were very beneficial to his maturity and character on and off the ice.

"When I was young, I was more of a sore loser," he said. "At some point, I realized that, in hockey, you can't have an attitude like that if you want to go far. It really helped me change my attitude."

As a dominant young player, Belley said that - despite his natural offensive instincts and dynamic skillset - he was interested in becoming a defenseman because it would put him in a position to see the ice even more. Looking up to NHL superstars like Ray Bourque and Paul Coffey, Belley modeled his style of play after some of his favorite pro defensemen.

"I'm a player with a pretty good IQ," he said. "So, I like

"It's a little bit of an open try out. The coach spotted me, he was making cuts, but he kept me and kept me and I eventually made the team.

"The first year I wasn't expecting to make it," he added. "I was surprised and I was really happy.

In his first year with the Mustangs (2013-14), Belley put up 10 points (two goals, eight assists) in 35 games, helping the team finish fourth place in the Metro division in the Eastern Ontario Junior Hockey League (EOJHL).

Struggling to find his groove for the better part of his first Junior season, Belley admitted that the league's rugged style of play made the transition from minor hockey to the Junior level less seamless than he would've liked.

"The style of play is very different," he said. "In my first year of Junior, it was a little bit intimidating. You arrive and you're a 17-18 year-old kid going up against 20-21 year-olds and there are fights. You had to keep it in account, so it plays

Putting a cherry on the cake, his Mustangs also qualified for the Dodge Cup where they won their way to the knockout stage before being eliminated in the semi-finals.

For his third and final year of Junior, Belley had to find he had been missing - fast, offena young age, he played mostly at the BB level for Gatineau another place to play since the Gatineau Flames had been removed from the EOJHL. During the offseason, he spoke with Grandmaison, who had been named as the first head coach of the newly established Quebec Junior AAA Hockey League (QJAAAHL) team, the Gatineau Flames.

Knowing he could rely on his abilities with a young expansion club, Grandmaison was interested in acquiring Belley's services and invited him to try out for the team.

"I had to decide 'Should I play hockey just for fun in Junior C or should I step up and play my final year in Junior AAA?" he said. "So, I showed up to try outs and I made the Junior

In his lone season as a Flame, Belley scored 24 points (nine goals, 15 assists) in 54 games, while playing alongside Comets teammate Hugo Petit. Transitioning from a more systemic and defensive game in the EOJHL to the high-flying open style of play in the QJAAAHL, Belley said he had to sharpen up his skating and stickhandling skills in order to keep up with the phenoms of the league.

"In Junior AAA there were guys that - most of them were drafted in the QMJHL - were all amazing hockey players," he said. "It really benefitted me, playing with really good players against other good players ... I think I really progressed even if we didn't have a good year as a team."

"I was already at UQO, I was in University in Hull already," he said. "To do the try out, I had to be a student at the University of Ottawa and I didn't want to take any chances of changing universities and not making the team."

Plus, with tuition fees significantly lower and the commute less of a pain at UQO, he decided it was best to stick with what he had going on and essentially call it a career. However, during the offseason, Belley spoke with one of his old Mustang teammates David Ouellette who said he was returning home to Beloeil, Que. to play senior hockey since his Junior years had come to a close.

"We stayed in touch and I asked him how he liked things time," he said. "I live with my girlover there," Belley said. "He said things were great. So, he talked to his coach about me joining the team"

At the start of the 2017-18 season, Belley travelled to Beloeil to join the Riverains of the Richelieu Senior Hockey League Along with completely changing positions, being slotted as (RSHL) for a one-game trial to see if he wanted to stick around that's what I want to do."

After officially joining the team, Belley played nine games with the Riverains, putting up three points. While he was happy to still be playing hockey in a competitive setting, he admitted that he didn't exactly enjoy his time in the league mainly because of what kind of hockey it offered.

"It wasn't really my style of play," he said. "It's a league that's really physical. There are a lot of big guys, a lot of toughness and it wasn't my style of play. So, I didn't come back to play there after that. I have more fun playing here."

The following summer, Belley received a Facebook message from Comets' director of hockey operations, Sebastien Bonnerot, regarding an opportunity to join the newly established Pontiac Senior Comets.

After trying out his first game in the OSAAHL, Belley realized that the league offered exactly what sive-based competitive hockey

"Pretty much, it was the thrill of competitive hockey that I was missing," he said. "So, that's why wanted to go back to playing hockey."

In his first season in Comets colours (2018-19), Belley played forward where he ended up fourth on the team in scoring, with 20 points (eight goals, 12 assists) in 18 games.

After enjoying himself so much during the team's inaugural season, Belley said he was thrilled at the can when tryouts began back in July.

"It's a great group of guys and it's fun to have that feeling of seeing the guys every week,"

Playing a two-way forward role throughout his Junior career and during his first season with the Comets, Belley said that he spoke with head coach Jean-Francois Lavergne who previously knew and wanted to use him in such a role to help balance the Comets' dynamic lineup.

"Last year I played on offense and this year I went on defense," he said. "I spoke with J-F Lavergne ... since we already had a lot of forwards and we were lacking defensemen, he asked me to try things out on defense and he was

Away from the rink, the 24-vear-old Gatineau native still resides in his hometown and is just about set to earn his Bachelor's degree in administrative finance from UOO.

Currently working for the federal government in Ottawa, Belley said he plans on continuing his career in the same field while playing the game he loves for as long as life allows him to.

"I'm still young and I have friend and in a few years, I'll have a kid, a house, obligations and all that. So, I don't know if I'll be able to play for long. But for now,

3. Have the proper ingredients and tools ready. Go through your recipe before hand (alone) to see what steps you will need to take and get everything you will need to use. Some little bakers aren't that patient when it comes to waiting.

4. Leave the neat freak out of the kitchen. Don't be afraid to get messy or for your workspace to get messy. Kids love being a part of the action but they are not at all careful. This past weekend we had the biggest flour explosion yet - my daughter looked at me and said, "I'm so sorry" - to which I replied, "It isn't a baking day without flour everywhere." Which was totally true. We cleaned up at the end. They love measuring, dumping, pouring and mixing. Let them enjoy being a part of the process and leave yourself a little extra time at the end to sweep or vacuum up the little spills. Don't forget to include little bakers in this process as well, they are great sweepers and vacuumers and dish dryers.

5. Have simple but important rules for working in the kitchen together. Always wash hands before helping with food prep (in our house they have to wash their hands for the length of time it takes to sing Happy Birthday), pay attention when using sharp tools or hot surfaces and follow directions!

6. When I consulted my husband about the most important tip for baking with children, we both agreed it's hands down having lots of patience. Steps need to be repeated, rules need to be repeated and praise needs to be given. A lot. So take a few deep breaths and remember that years from now they'll be telling friends and loved ones how much they enjoyed baking Christmas cookies before Christmas with their parents.

7. One last thing, if you choose recipes that can be personalized like sugar cookies or cupcakes let them decorate the way they see fit. Put out the decorations and set a few ground rules (i.e a spoonful of each type of sprinkle) and watch them be artistic. The type A in you has to take a hike for this part of the process). I find it very interesting watching each of my children go about this task differently. It really can tell you a lot about their personality.

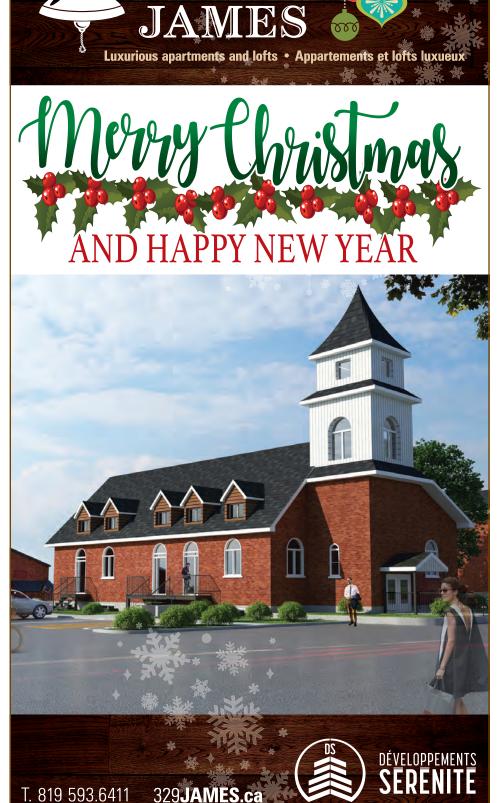

However you and your family choose to prepare for Christmas, we wish you the Happiest and Merriest Christmas

The Shawville Arena was packed on Saturday morning, as hundreds of people from the region filled the stands to watch local figure skating prodigies show off their latest choreographies during the Shawville Figure Skating Club's annual Christmas Show and Bake Sale.

Throughout the event, attendees cheered from the stands, as scores of skaters hit the ice in nearly 20 different choreographies set to a number of Christmas tunes.

The show included several group performances, as well as a number of trios, to songs like "Frosty the Snowman", "Holly Jolly Christmas" and "Run, Run Rudolph".

To cap things off in style, all skaters hit the ice to the sounds of "Do They Know It's Christmas" for an epic finale.

Inside the lobby, Heidi Ardern from Hardy Plants sold colourful flower bouquets for the young skaters to receive at the end of their performances

Comets defeat Diables 8-4

OTTER LAKE

Dec. 14, 2019

The Pontiac Senior Comets have won their eighth straight game and second on the road, after eviscerating the Mont-Tremblant Diables (3-8-1) by a score of 8-4 in their own barn on Saturday night.

With the result, the Comets sit in first place in the Outaouais Senior AA Hockey League (OSAAHL) standings with a 9-4-0 record, six points ahead of the second-place Maniwaki Forestiers

Coming into the game against the last-ranked team in the league, the Comets knew that they had to come out strong and avoid complacency in order to come back home with the two points and extend its successful streak.

In the first period, the boys from Coulonge fell behind early, allowing two goals in the first eight minutes of the game, including a shorthanded mark-

But, just under 12 minutes in, Comet's forward Matthew Warren reduced the deficit to one with his 11th goal of the campaign assisted by David Fouche on the powerplay.

A little more than a minute later, Olivier Donovan's made it 2-2 with his second goal of the season, set up by Hugo Petit and Foucher.

The Comet potent attack struck again with under three minutes left in the frame, as Ryan Peck made it 3-2 Comets with his third goal of the season. Assists came from defensemen things changed quickly. We Jeremy Picard Fiset and Maxime Belley.

In the second period, the Comets kept pressing and around seven and a half minassisted by Peck.

Beblois followed up with his second of the game making it 5-2, with help from Justin Charbonneau and Justin Lafleur.

At around the mid-way point of the period, the Diables clawed themselves back in the game with two goals of their own. However, with just under three minutes remaining in the frame, Peck doubled the Comets' lead before Warren made it 7-4 with his 12th snipe of the season.

Coming into the third period, the Comets wanted to play solid, shut-down hockey for the final 20 minutes and did just that - preventing the Diables from producing much anything offensively.

Just over 13 minutes into the frame, Comets' captain Darcy Findlay put the nail in the coffin with his sixth tally of the season, assisted by Charbonneau and

With three points on the night (two goals, one assist), Peck received first star honours and Deblois took home the second star with a two-goal performance of his own.

After the game, Comets' head coach Jean-Francois Lavergne said he was glad with his team's performance, praising his player's resiliency after going down a couple of goals in the early part of the game.

"We didn't start things off very well," he said. "We were a little bit unlucky early. But showed character even if we were down 2-0, we came back."

Having won eight straight games, Lavergne pointed to consistent performances from his core of veterans leaders as well as his supporting cast as key factors in the team's unprecedented run of success.

"No one panics on this team," he said. "The guys know how they need to play to win and they're conscious that there are other good teams in the league. There are never easy games."

"Guys like Darcy [Findlay], Matt Warren, Dave Foucher who don't hesitate to speak up when things aren't going well who set the example for other guys," he said. "Others who are more obscure like Olivier Donovan, Ryan Peck, Ben Harris who are furious grinders, it rubs off on the rest of the team."

Going forward, Lavergne said his team knows they won't be surprising anyone in the OSAAHL because they're likely the team to beat. But with a locker room boasting loads of confidence and leadership, he expects not from his players besides sticking to what's been working.

"We know our players and we know what they're capable of," he said. "We're respecting how our opponent plays us, we have our way of playing by using speed and fast transition play. They have to adjust to playing us."

For Lavergne, it's all about taking things one game at a

Young gingerbread architects get busy building houses

On Thursday evening, children across Pontiac got the chance to design and build their own gingerbread houses. A group in Shawville, organized by the Parent's Voice, had 30 children registered according to organizer Melissa Soulière and took place at the Community Hall. According to one of the event's organizers Wendy Moore, the event was an opportunity for locals to get together to spread joy over a holiday meal and support local artisans while getting their Christmas shopping done at the same time.

She explained that the event originally started out as an initiative to raise funds to purchase new play structures for the schoolyard.

Helped by fundraisers and government grants, the school was able to purchase a brandnew play structure after the first two years. For this year's fundraiser, the school's governing board is eyeing an outdoor classroom with a shelter.

Moore believes the shelter would be of great benefit to the school because it would give students an opportunity to study outside when the weather

DEATH

Farrell, Neil "Tubby" -October 14, 1954-December 2, 2019

Peacefully in hospital, Shawville, Quebec surrounded by his family, at the age of 65 years. Loving father of Dawn and Bert. Cherished Poppa of Jacob, Xander and Bentley. Predeceased by his parents, Red and Beth Farrell. Survived by his siblings, Ken "Sam" (Judy), Darlene (Jack Murdock) and Barb (Dwight Tanguay). Neil will be sadly missed by many nieces, nephews and friends. Neil was a very active community member who served as union president at Haley Industries. He was also involved in council, the RA, the cemetery, and Fire Department. He was also active in his local church, where he served as church warden. A celebration of his life will take place in summer, 2020. Donations to the Portage du Fort Cemetery are gratefully accepted.

construction bois

OUÉBEC Le 25 nov. 2019 Québec annonce le lancement de deux nouveaux programmes visant à soutenir bois. L'investissement total est de plus de 5 M$.

Optimisation et automatisation

Face à la concurrence, à la mutation des marchés et entreprises québécoises de la construction repensent leur modèle d'affaires en se tournant davantage vers la préfabrication et l'offre de solutions intégrées. Une somme de 3,2 M$ est donc consacrée au Programme préfabrication en bois : optimisation et automatisation (PPBOA) afin d'accroître la compétitivité des producteurs de produits préfabriqués en bois. Ce programme permettra aux entreprises d'automatiser et d'optimiser leurs processus de fabrication et d'affaires, afin d'offrir des produits à plus grande valeur ajoutée, et ce, à moindre coût. Ces entreprises pourront ainsi répondre à l'augmentation de la demande mondiale pour les produits structuraux préfabriqués en bois utilisés dans la construction de bâtiments non résidentiels et multifamiliaux.

programmes Ces accroîtront la compétitivité des entreprises dans le secteur de la construction bois. Nul doute que l'annonce d'aujourd'hui se traduira, d'ici trois ans, en une amélioration des processus de fabrication et d'affaires des entreprises soutenues afin d'augmenter leur productivité. À terme, c'est l'ensemble de l'économie québécoise qui en sortira gagnante. » M. Pierre Dufour, ministre des Forêts, de la Faune et des Parcs.

« Le bois est un choix intéressant pour réduire l'empreinte carbone des bâtiments, puisqu'il génère peu d'émissions de GES pendant son cycle de vie si on le compare à d'autres matériaux couramment utilisés dans la construction. C'est pourquoi le Gouvernement du Québec a choisi d'utiliser des sommes du Fonds vert, afin de mieux faire connaître les avantages relatifs au matériau bois et de faire évoluer les pratiques. Le Programme de formation continue sur l'utilisation du bois dans la construction constitue un bon investissement pour le climat! » M. QUÉBEC Le 28 nov. 2019

La ministre de la Santé et des Services sociaux, Danielle McCann, est fière d'annoncer qu'une entente a été conclue avec la Fédération des médecins spécialistes du Québec (FMSQ) pour le déploiement d'une couverture régionale dans tous les hôpitaux du Québec en chirurgie générale et en obstétrique. Cette entente concerne notamment des régions plus à risques comme Amqui au Bas-Saint-Laurent et Shawville en

Par l'entremise de la création de groupes concertés de médecins spécialistes remplaçants, les plans provinciaux permettront d'assurer une prestation continue des soins et de limiter les ruptures de services dans ces deux spécialités, à l'instar du plan en anesthésie an, qui donne de bons résultats.

Les chirurgiens offriront des possible sur le territoire. Les leur communauté et pourront, s'ils ont la formation nécessaire, procéder à des césariennes dans les établissements en région éloignée. Des mécanismes de soutien d'urgence seront aussi déployés, par l'entremise d'équipes volantes en chirurgie et en obstétrique.
